It is no doubt that the Internet is one of the greatest inventions in recent years. In particular, Internet significantly affects my life in terms of information-getting, and communication.

Thanks to the Internet, I can send any message and information to everywhere in the world immediately. In addition, it is easy and quick for reporters to upload the latest information and news to the web so that I can read all of them across time and space. With the help of the Internet, information exchange has become more convenient as well as easier to be accessed and shared. In particular, getting information on the Internet not only saves my time but also promotes my ability of information-evaluation. Through searching and browsing on the Internet, I can increase my knowledge and develop skills of information-searching.

Moreover, I can use the Internet to communicate with our friends, parents, and even strangers all over the world. It is a huge progression for human beings because distance is not a problem anymore to build up communication between people. This new mode of communication is not only budget-friendly but also creating more opportunities for me to talk with my parents and friends. For one thing, it usually costs a lot when making a phone call overseas. Economically, much money can be kept through Internet-based communicative softwares such as Skype, Line, or WebChat. For another, chatting with my parents and friends across time and space may easily happen if Internet is available. Therefore, the invention of Internet significantly brings an impact on my life.

In conclusion, the use of the Internet really gives me convenience and unprecedented effect on my life. It changes the way of information-getting and brings me a new mode of communication with other people. With the development of the Internet, my life has been influenced greatly.
